ABORIGINAL INITIATIVES FUND III
ABORIGINAL INITIATIVES FUND III
General Application Framework
To pursue its commitment to economic and social development for Aboriginal communities, the Government of Québec has created the Aboriginal Initiatives Fund (AIF) III for a total of $135 million over five years. The funds will be used to

- support economic development initiatives,
- invest in community infrastructure,
- issue loan guarantees to help Aboriginal project applicants fund their initiatives,
- help community organizations,
- encourage social development,
- help pay for consultations with Aboriginal communities, and
- support Aboriginal people in urban environments.

AIF III is made up of seven different components that are managed by the Minister responsible for Native Affairs. The goal of the fund is to support the economic, social, and community development of Aboriginal people and to meet government requirements for consultation.

To this end, AIF III will financially support promising initiatives that show potential for significant positive spinoffs.

- The first source of funding for projects submitted to AIF III must be existing programs offered by the federal government and Québec ministries and government agencies.
- AIF III will only fund projects that cannot be supported by other programs and, as applicable, projects that need additional support beyond what is available through existing programs.

Therefore, for AIF III aid to be approved, in general the project must be funded jointly by the community, project applicant, federal government, or other partner.

The applicant must demonstrate financial need and submit all required documentation to Secrétariat aux affaires autochtones (SAA) and, as the case may be, to the relevant Aboriginal authorities.

Lastly, to be eligible for AIF III funding, expenses must be incurred after the date on which the application for financial aid is submitted. The Minister responsible for Native Affairs will not approve projects until a financial plan has been drawn up. Such plans should include funding from the federal government, if applicable.
Project selection

Projects are selected as follows:

- Applications for funding are submitted.
- SAA reviews the applications.
- As necessary, applications are sent to the relevant ministries and government agencies for review in terms of suitability, feasibility, and funding.
- SAA makes recommendations.
- Acceptance or rejection letters are mailed to applicants.
- If a project is approved, an acceptance letter is sent and/or a funding agreement is signed with the project applicant.

Program term

AIF III comes into effect on the date it is approved and ends on March 31, 2022.
Economic Development
Under the economic development component of AIF III, $60 million is available for the Aboriginal nations and communities targeted by the program. The objectives of this component are to

- create an environment that fosters economic development,
- create and develop businesses,
- create and protect jobs,
- generate investment in Aboriginal communities,
- promote entrepreneurship among women and young people, and
- encourage the development of social economy businesses.

A. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

To be eligible for the economic development component, a nation or community must

- sign a special agreement with the Minister responsible for Native Affairs during the term of AIF III (after the fund is approved and before April 1, 2022) in which the nation or community undertakes to submit economic development projects (regardless of the date on which such an agreement is signed, it will end on March 31, 2022), and
- not have signed an agreement with the Government of Québec allowing the provincial government to fund economic development projects, unless such an agreement specifies that it will not be detrimental to the renewal of AIF III funding.

For communities that have not used up the economic development budget allocated to them under the second Aboriginal Initiatives Fund (AIF II), any remaining amounts will be automatically rolled over to the new special agreement. The special agreement signed under AIF II will then be cancelled and the remaining funds will be subject to the rules herein. All projects submitted but not reviewed under AIF II can remain subject to AIF II or be transferred to the new special agreement for review.

B. ELIGIBLE ORGANIZATIONS

- Aboriginal communities and nations recognized by the Québec National Assembly
- Aboriginal nonprofit organizations or equivalent
- Aboriginal for-profit organizations or equivalent

C. ELIGIBLE PROJECTS

To be eligible for funds earmarked for nations and communities, economic development projects must

- be consistent with the objectives for this component of the fund, and
- be given priority by the nation or community, by resolution, and
- be submitted to the SAA by March 31, 2022.

Applications for funds reserved for social economy projects, young entrepreneurs, women, and mobilization projects, must

- be consistent with the objectives for this component of the fund, and
- be submitted to the SAA by March 31, 2022.

Eligible projects must fall under one of the following six categories:
Entrepreneurship

This category is for the launch, expansion, or development of a business. The project must also meet one or more of the following requirements:

- Be beneficial for the Aboriginal population
- Create jobs for Aboriginal people
- Be economically and socially sustainable
- Raise the profile of the Aboriginal nation or community and the Aboriginal population in general

Studies

This category is for studies that must be carried out before a project eligible for the economic development component can be put in place. This may include:

- a business plan,
- a technical or financial feasibility study,
- a market analysis for an investment project, and
- studies on the integrated management of resources and traditional Aboriginal pursuits.

Studies may not exceed 10% of the total budget for economic development in the nation or community.

Aid for local economic development

This category is for projects that help the nation or community better plan its own economic development. More specifically, such projects must seek to:

- help communities draw up a strategic economic development plan,
- identify, showcase, and improve access to local resources, and
- recruit and train local economic development agents in Aboriginal communities.

Financial assistance for local economic development may not exceed 30% of the portion of the economic development budget earmarked for the nation or community.

Workforce training

This category is for the development of the Aboriginal workforce, with a special emphasis on vocational training. Refresher workplace training required for the launch, expansion or development of a business project under this component of the program may be eligible as long as the trainee is an Aboriginal person.

Moreover, project applicants must ask local First Nation centers and local employment centers to be partners, pursuant to the respective responsibilities of such centers. The AIF III general application framework specifies that the program is intended to supplement other measures.

Social economy

This category is for projects submitted by nonprofit organizations active in the social economy. Under this program $2 million has been set aside for social economy projects developed by eligible businesses and organizations located in Aboriginal communities or elsewhere. There is a limit of $200,000 per project.

Social economy businesses sell products and services in up-and-coming industries that are just as diverse as the sectors of the economy covered by traditional businesses. The mission of “social” collective businesses is to sell goods and services that meet the needs of the community. They operate like a business but have a social purpose.
The social economy includes two types of businesses defined by their legal status:

1. Cooperative and mutualist companies, made up of cooperatives formed under the Cooperatives Act or the Act respecting Financial Services Cooperatives and mutual associations formed under the Insurance Act, and
2. Associations including nonprofit organizations, formed under Section III of the Companies Act and whose financial viability is based on own-source revenue generated by producing and selling goods and services.

The operating rules and principles of social economy businesses define them in a particular way. They must:

- have a mission of serving their members or the community rather than simply generating profit and targeting a financial return,
- be managed independently of the government,
- incorporate in their by-laws and procedures a democratic decision-making process that includes their customers,
- prioritize people and work over capital when sharing their surpluses and revenue, and
- base their operations on the principles of participation, empowerment, and individual and collective responsibility.

Nonprofits whose mission is not mainly entrepreneurial, such as community organizations, charities, economic development corporations, municipal agencies, and so on, are not social economy companies. However, these organizations can devise social economy projects that meet the criteria above, for reasons that include generating own-source revenue. Moreover, Aboriginal nonprofits in Aboriginal communities may also be eligible as long as the goals of their social economy projects include generating own-source revenue.

Economic mobilization

Projects in this category must have a mobilizing effect on the overall economy of Aboriginal communities. They must also be submitted by Aboriginal nonprofit organization and have garnered consensus among the Aboriginal nations concerned.

D. SUBMITTING APPLICATIONS

Project applicants must demonstrate their financial needs and submit to the SAA a business plan that includes the following information:

- A description of the applicants’ relevant skills and experience
- How the project will be beneficial
- What has been done to check whether the project is eligible for other funding programs
- The estimated operating budget for the next three years
- The latest financial statements, if applicable
E. ELIGIBLE COSTS

Some exceptions can be made in the following situations:

- For study, workforce training, and mobilization projects, all costs are eligible
- For local economic development aid and social economy projects, all costs are eligible for a maximum of five years

In the case of business acquisitions or acquisitions of interest in existing companies, the costs incurred are eligible if they have a direct and significant impact on the creation of jobs for Aboriginal people. The job creation aspect will be assessed according to the payroll or expected payroll to be paid by the eligible company or organization for all jobs held by Aboriginal people and created or secured through the project.

The announcements or public notices must be distributed widely enough to reach an adequate number of competent and interested contractors, resulting in a competitive bidding process.

G. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Financial assistance is given as a grant. The maximum grant is determined according to the financial needs of the applicant and the aid given by the federal government and Québec ministries and government.

Aid granted by the Government of Québec and its agencies cannot exceed 50% of eligible expenses, and the total aid from the federal and provincial governments cannot exceed 90% of the project’s total cost, with one exception.

In order to encourage partnerships between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people, any business formed by such a partnership will be 100% eligible for the program, under the condition that the Aboriginal applicant retain effective control and owns at least 50% of the company. If the Aboriginal developer is not the majority owner of the company, the financial aid that can be awarded for the project will match the proportion of the company under Aboriginal ownership.

Special category

To make funding more accessible for Aboriginal women and youth, a special category totaling $2.55 million has been put in place. The SAA has increased the combined financial assistance awarded by the Government of Québec and its agencies to 70% of eligible expenses for projects carried out by Aboriginal women and youth. Similarly, the combined assistance granted by the federal and provincial governments has been raised to 95% of the total costs of such projects. Only young Aboriginal people aged 35 or under and Aboriginal women of all ages may benefit from this special funding category.

Companies for which over 50% of effective control and ownership are held by young Aboriginal entrepreneurs age 35 or under or female Aboriginal entrepreneurs of all ages are fully eligible.

Support for Consultation
A. DESCRIPTION OF HOW FUNDING CAN BE USED

To best meet the needs of Aboriginal nations and communities, this component has been divided into two categories.

- Funding for consultations – Category I
- Funding for specific projects – Category II

To deal with the broad range of topics and many consultations initiated by the Government of Québec, the first category targets a financing approach based on creating consultation offices. The objective of such offices is to give communities specific resources for taking part in these government consultations. The amount of the funding is determined by the SAA in cooperation with the relevant ministries, taking into account the amount of work expected for a given period. In this way, communities will have enough funds to acquire what they need to do the work.

The second category will target funding for specific projects designed to offer solutions to various challenges that the Aboriginal nation or community and the Government of Québec may identify jointly. Such projects have significant requirements in terms of organization, cooperation, and consultation. Communities are then given supplemental funds so they can acquire the additional resources they need to take part in the collaboration and discussions. Aboriginal people will thus be able to benefit from the appropriate expertise when specific needs arise. This will only enhance their experience as participants.

B. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

CATEGORY I – CONSULTATION

To apply under this category, nations or communities must have been invited by a ministry, government agency, or government corporation to participate in a consultation process as defined in the Interim Guide for Consulting the Aboriginal Communities (Interim Guide). Aboriginal nations and communities that submit a major project to enhance their participation in the consultations initiated by the Government of Québec can also apply under this category.

CATEGORY II – SPECIFIC PROJECTS

To apply under this category, nations or communities must have been approached by the Government of Québec regarding a specific project that aims to offer solutions to a variety of challenges or problems identified jointly by the Aboriginal community and the provincial government.
