

For applicants for a teaching licence and teaching licence holders (Education Act, sections 25.1 and following)

Under the legislative provisions of the Education Act dealing with judicial records (integrated into this Act by Chapter 16 of the Statutes of Québec of 2005), a judicial record must mention:

- any conviction for a criminal or penal offence committed in Canada or elsewhere, unless a pardon has been obtained for that offence
- any charge still pending for a criminal or penal offence committed in Canada or elsewhere
- any court order subsisting against the applicant in Canada or elsewhere

Some definitions and useful information

Criminal offence

An offence created by a federal law to impose a sanction for grave misconduct that infringes the fundamental values of society. Laws that define criminal offences include the Criminal Code and the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act.

Penal offence

An offence created by a federal or provincial law to impose a sanction for conduct that harms the public interest. For example, the Employment Insurance Act and the Canadian Environmental Protection Act include penal offences created by a federal law; the Highway Safety Code and the Youth Protection Act include penal offences created by a provincial law. A penal offence may also result from the exercise of powers granted to municipal authorities (e.g. an offence covered by a municipal by-law).

Charge still pending

A charge that has been laid in a case where the judicial or administrative tribunal has not yet rendered a decision.

Court order

A decision by a judge requiring a person to respect certain conditions, such as a surety under sections 810 and following of the Criminal Code, a probation order, an order of prohibition to drive or to possess firearms, a restitution order or an order prohibiting a person from contacting persons under age 14 or being in a place where such persons are likely to be encountered. This list is not comprehensive. Under the Criminal Code, a discharge is considered a court order.

Conviction for an offence for which a record suspension (pardon) has been obtained

An offence for which a pardon has been obtained need not be mentioned in the declaration. For more information on applications for pardon, see the Parole Board of Canada Web site at: <https://www.canada.ca/en/parole-board.html>.

- a teaching licence holder must, within 10 days of being notified of a change in his or her judicial record, inform the Ministère de l'Éducation of the change, regardless of whether he or she has already filed a declaration concerning his or her judicial record
- the Ministère de l'Éducation may verify the declaration or have it verified, in particular by a Québec police force, and may communicate or receive any information for the purposes of the verification.
