Important information

The Basic Income Program is for adults who are eligible for the Social Solidarity Program and have had severely limited capacity for employment for at least 66 months over the previous 72 months.

A person who has refused admission to the Basic Income Program the first time they were admitted may, at any time, apply for readmission. The person can be readmitted to the Basic Income Program for the months following the month of the application for a change of program if they still meet the eligibility requirements.

The basic income is individual financial assistance. If you are admitted to the program, you will be entitled to the basic income. Based on your situation, you could be entitled to adjustments (adjustment for a single person and adjustments for dependent children), which will be added to the basic income. To determine your basic income, we will take into account your income as well as the cash (liquid assets) and property that you have. If you have a spouse who is not a recipient under a last-resort financial assistance program or the Basic Income Program, we will also take into account your spouse's income and the cash (liquid assets) that they have.

The Basic Income Program provides for exclusions, including the following :

- An exclusion related to the value of the recipient's primary residence (the value is excluded in full)
- An exclusion of $500,000 applicable to the recipient's property
- An exclusion of $20,000 applicable to the cash (liquid assets) that the recipient has
- A basic annual exclusion applicable to the recipient's work income (the exclusion is calculated by multiplying the basic benefit by 12)

Please note that you must ensure that you file your income tax returns each year with Revenu Québec. Also, you must inform us without delay if your situation changes.
