This measure allows the members of a group of up to eight hunters to agree on a commitment to use a moose without antlers hunting licence obtained by random draw and issued to one of them, in a wildlife reserve where this licence is valid. Such a measure is possible only in a wildlife reserve, under the following conditions:

- When entering the wildlife reserve, the group of hunters gives the attendant at the reception post a copy of the commitment form allowing them to use one member's moose without antlers hunting licence. The form shows the name of the holder of this licence, their regular moose hunting licence number and their moose without antlers hunting licence number, the purpose and duration of the commitment, the name of the wildlife reserve, the date of the commitment, as well as the names and signatures of the hunters who may use this moose without antlers hunting licence and their valid moose hunting licence number. The form on the front is provided for this purpose.
- The duration of the commitment may not exceed the duration of the stay in the wildlife reserve.
- All hunters whose names appear on the commitment form and whose hunting licence is valid may, for the duration indicated therein, use the moose without antlers hunting licence in the wildlife reserve concerned, as long as the licence holder is present on the territory and until a moose without antlers is harvested by one of them.
- The moose without antlers hunting licence expires as soon as a moose without antlers is harvested. The hunter who harvested it must immediately identify the moose without antlers using the unique number from their own transportation coupon.
- If the holder of the moose without antlers hunting licence harvests a moose with antlers, the other hunters in the group (whose licence is valid) retain the privilege of harvesting a moose without antlers for the duration of the authorization, provided that this holder remains present on the territory and that the group is entitled to harvest more than one moose.
- At the time of registration, the hunter who harvested the moose without antlers must present their regular licence and the moose without antlers hunting licence under which the animal was harvested.

In a wildlife reserve, it is up to the holder of a moose without antlers hunting licence to decide whether to share their licence with the other hunters in their group when they enter the territory.

It is also the responsibility of the members of this group to respect the number of animals they may harvest. To this end, the persons taking part in moose without antlers hunting should ensure they always hunt close enough to one another to be able to communicate when a moose is harvested and to avoid multiple harvests.
